

The Land Consolidation Court of Norway – A Court for Landed Property and Land Rights

Per Kåre Sky and Øyvind Ravna, Norway

Keywords Land management, Land readjustment, land consolidation.

SUMMARY

Existing property structure is not always adapted to the development of society. The owners of joint properties are not able to agree on new ways of utilization. One building case has stopped because there are disagreements about where the property boundaries are. The government is building a railway track which divides farming properties. There are many examples. To solve these problems many people demand a land consolidation case. We are going to visit someone that has participated in a land consolidation case so that we can look one some of the problems they have addressed. People themselves explain what they have gained in the land consolidation case. The film is 35 minutes long and has English voice.
